Eight employees of Manatee County government were overpaid in wages and worker's compensation claims during fiscal years 1994-95 and 1995-96.

The Clerk of Circuit Court reported the error Thursday in a routine audit of the county's Risk Management Division. The clerk's auditors are authorized by state law to verify the bookkeeping of county departments.

While reviewing more than $500,000 paid out for worker's compensation claims during the two-year period, auditors discovered that eight injured employees received a total of $2,332 too much pay while they were on leave.

The mistakes were attributed to errors on time cards made by the employees or their superiors.

State law prohibits the county from seeking reimbursement for the disability pay. Arrangements are being made for the employees to reimburse the county, through payroll deductions, for the overpayment of wages.

Auditors made some recommendations on policies and procedures but found "no indications of irregularities, abuse or illegal acts" in the Risk Management Division.
